Mr. Jerome then called Justice Charles N.
Tainter to the witness stand.
He recalled the fact that in O tober last,
when the case of Missie st. Clair, arrested for keeping a disorderly house, was before him, Gardner asked him to question the woman about a man who was going about representing himself as an agent of the Soclety and blackmailing women.
He had no knowledge as to Gardner's general reputation, and the Recorder would not let him give his own opinion of the prisoner.
He said that Gardner had given him to understand that several women besides Mamie
St. Clair had been blackmailed by the togus agent.

He admitted that he hadn't seen much of Cardner for seven years and didn't know what sort of a reputation he may have made here during that time.

John L. Taylor, formerly of Jersey City, but now of Kensington, Conn., also testified that Gardner's reputation was good.
